

Digitale Resilienz ist ein Team sport

Forum Kommunikationskultur 2025

A man with reddish hair and sunglasses is the central figure, holding a white sign with black text and making a peace sign with his right hand. He is wearing a light grey t-shirt and khaki pants. To his left, another person in a dark shirt and cap is partially visible. The background is filled with green trees and a crowd of people, suggesting an outdoor protest or rally. A sign with the word 'LIBER' is partially visible in the background.

SHIT IS FUCKED UP AND BULLSHIT

LIBER

A man with short brown hair, wearing a dark blue suit, a light blue shirt, and a brown tie, is seated in a black leather armchair. He is gesturing with both hands, palms facing outwards, as if explaining something. The background is a solid blue wall. A black rectangular box with white text is overlaid on the center of the image.

Individuelle Verantwortung

“If the experience of modern society shows us anything, however, it is that technologies are not merely aids to human activity, but also powerful forces acting to reshape that activity and its meaning. The introduction of a robot to an industrial workplace not only increases productivity, but often radically changes the process of production, redefining what “work” means in that setting. When a sophisticated new technique or instrument is adopted in medical practice, it transforms not only what doctors do, but also the ways people think about health, sickness, and medical care.”

Langdon Winner – The Whale and the Reactor

„To have more to say, we need more experiments. The goal of these experiments shouldn't be a one-to-one replacement of each online mall with its deprivatized doppelganger. You can't simply clone Facebook, place it under public or cooperative ownership, and expect substantially different results. Online malls organize online life through a particular architecture, and that architecture makes certain choices for us. To make new choices—to create spaces where we can make those choices collectively—we need new architectures.“

Ben Tarnoff – Internet For The People

1.

Demokratisierung

2. Verkleinerung

3. Schichten

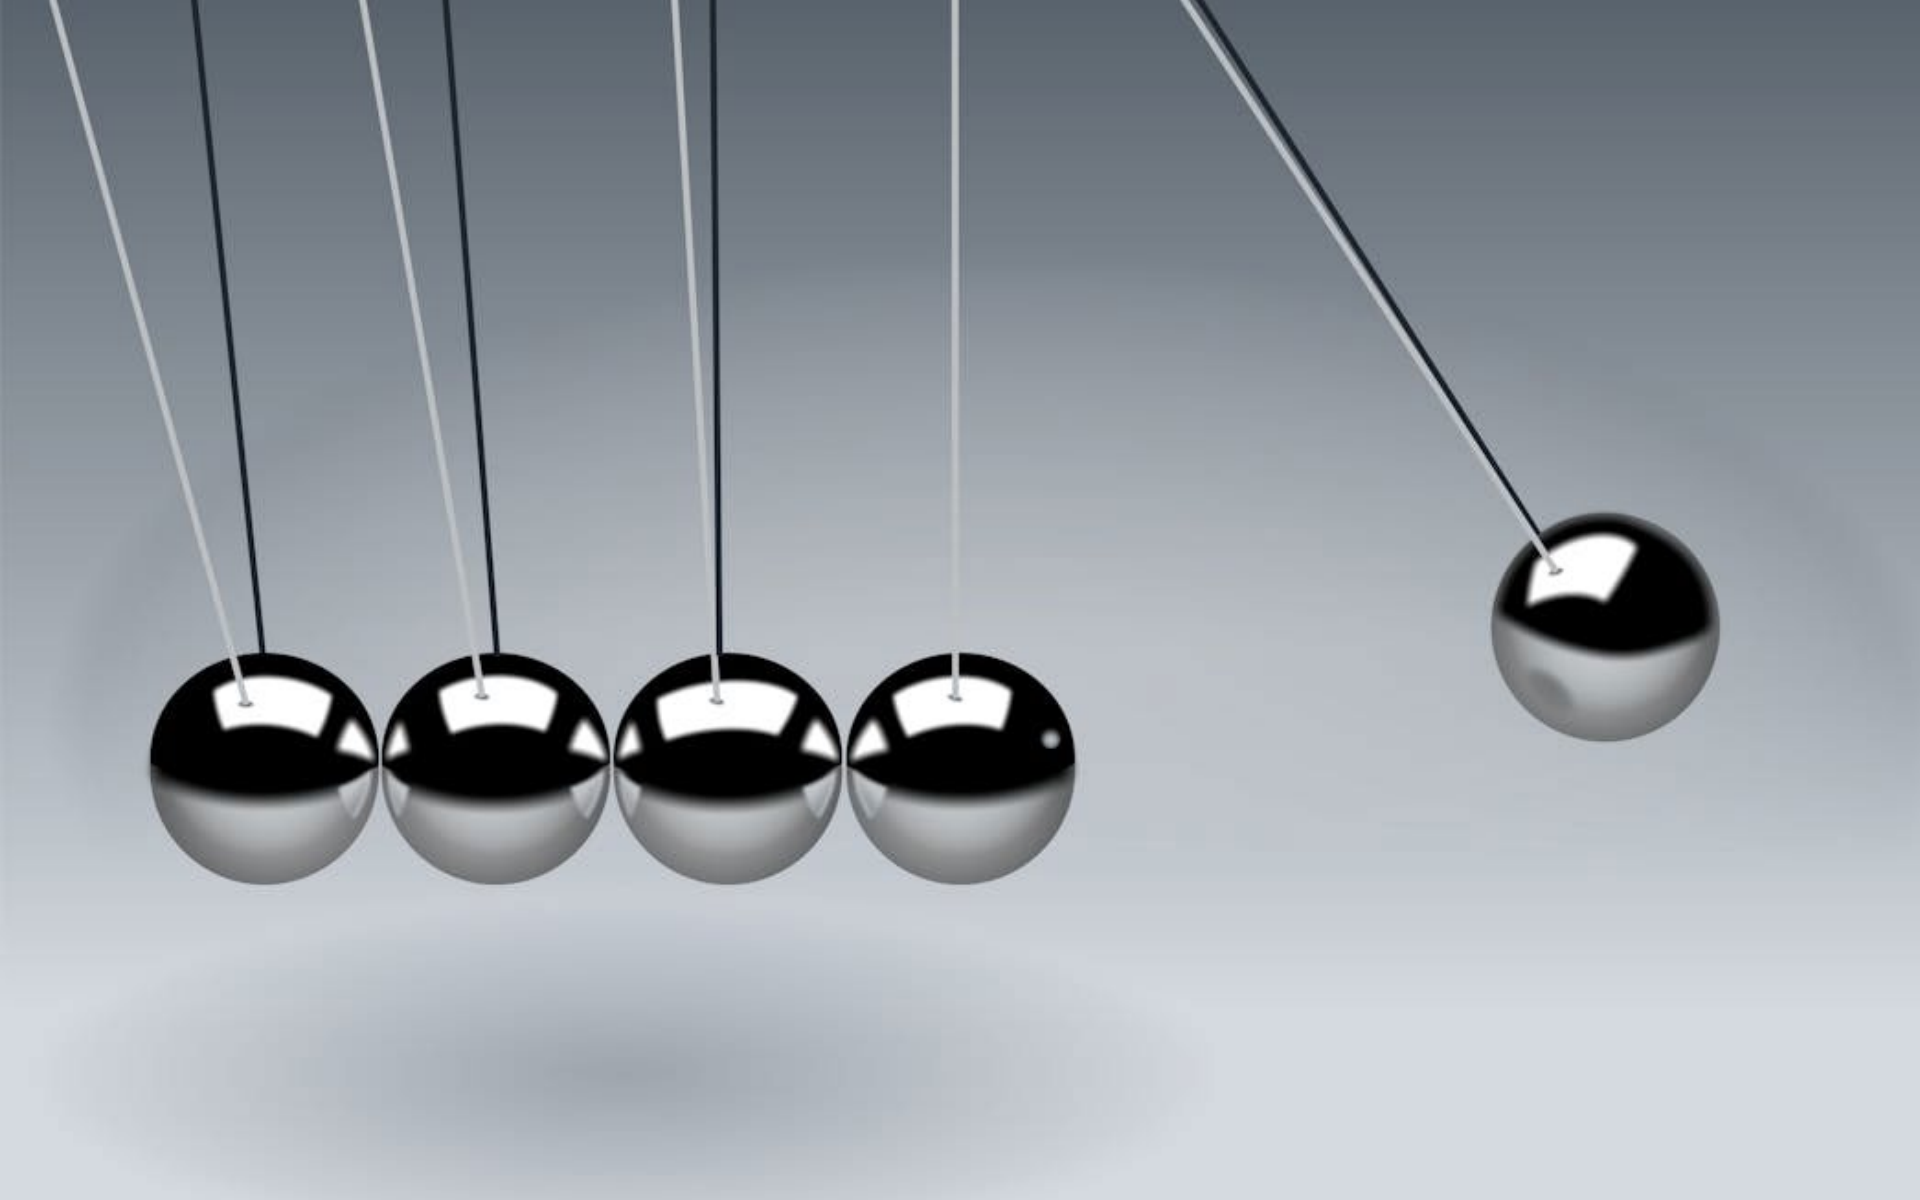

4. Moderation

5. Räume für “fucking around”

weniger

mehr

Web

<https://tante.cc>

Mastodon/Fediverse

<https://tldr.nettime.org/@tante>

Bluesky:

@tante.cc

